Italy Decrees Emergency Measures to Fight Terrorism

ROME, March 21.-The Italian government, taking note of a "situation of emergency," today decreed stiff anti-terrorism measures, including a mandatory maximum penalty of life imprisonment for kidnappers who kill their victims.

The measures, which also increase police detention, interrogation, and wiretapping powers, were ordered as the search equationed for former Premier Aldo Moro, kidnepped by the urban guerrilla Red Brigades last

"In these moments we have to make all the sacrifices necessary to overcome this situation of emergency," Justice Minister Paolo Bonifacio salá after a Cabinet session. He said that the decrees were needed "because we are living in difficult times' and because law officers needed extra powers to combat violence.

The Cabinet rejected demands for introduction of the death penalty, banned since the end of World War II, and for the curfews. The Cabinet increased the maximum penalty for kidnappers to life imprisonment if the victim is killed and to 30 years if the victim remains alive. Current penalties for convicted kidnappers range from 30 years to life in prison, depending on circumstances and the discretion of the court.

against Palestinian guerrillas a week ago. If the UN observer force is positioned first in the area around the Litani, it would tend to confirm reports that one of Israel's demands is that the withdrawal be a phased affair, beginning not at Israel's northern border but at the limit of Israel's advance into Lebanon.

The move into Lebanon began last Tuesday after a Palestinian attack on Israeli civilians in which 44 persons were killed, in-cluding nine of the attackers, and more than 70 people were

The withdrawal resolution was passed by the UN Security Council on Sunday and calls for a peacekeeping force of about 4,000. Some reports said that it would take at least a month for the entire UN force to be put into place, assuming that there were minimal snags in negotiating Israel's return to its accepted northern boundary.

Israeli Displeasure

Israeli officials made no secret of their displeasure that the UN n, prompted by the United States, was passed quickly while Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan were flying to the United States for talks with President Carter. The talks began in Washington today.

The Israelis' reaction to the resolution has been tepid at best does not reject it, but they have not welcomed it, either. The coolness stems in part from a long-standing distrust of UN peacekeeping missions-based on bad experiences.

Officials here today were speculating on what guarantees Israel wanted in exchange for replacing its military forces in Lebanon with a UN peacekeeping contin-

Mr. Weizman, Mr. Begin, Gen. Gur and others have stipulated that the chief consideration is that the Palestinian guerrillas not be given an opportunity to regroup near Israel's northern border, an area they have used in the past to make attacks on

Other considerations said to be of concern to the Israelis are:

 Firm arrangements to assure that the PLO not be based south of the Litani River.

• A requirement that the Mediterranean city of Tyre, which Gen. Gur said yesterday Israel capture at any time, be turned into a supervised civilian port. It has been, the Israelis claim, a major supply channel for the guerrillas.

fully black government to take over at the end of the year after one-man, one-vote election. However, a fundamental obstacle to the accord has been posed by the exclusion of the Patriotic Front, the nationalist alliance that has been challenging the government in a five-year-old guerrilla war.

The guerrilla leaders have denounced the agreement, particularly sections that safeguard the economic predominance of the 263,000 whites, as a "cellout" of They have also accused the black

The internal black leaders, sensitive to the allegations, insisted on changes in the normal government swearing in ceremony.

Instead of being conducted at the residence of Rhodesia's titular President, John Wrathall, it was held at Independence House, Mr. Smith's official home, with the oath being administered by Bishop Murindagomo, a political neutrai, in place of Mr. Wrathall.

In Addition, the oath was changed. U.S. High Court Supports New Kent State Trial

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP). -Ohio authorities must again face a $46-million damage suit for National Guard shootings of Kent State University students in 1970, the Supreme Court said

By denying the appeals of Gov. James Rhodes and members of the Ohio National Guard, the court cleared the way for a new federal trial in Cleveland. National Guard troops killed four students and wounded nine in a burst of gunfire May 4, 1970, during a campus protest against the invasion of Cambodia by U.S. troops in Vietnam.

Relatives of the four slain students and the nine wounded students sued state officials for alleged civil-rights violatious.

A 1975 trial cleared Gov. Rhodes and the National Guardsmen of all charges. One of the jurors had been assaulted and threatened during the trial, however, and a U.S. Appeals Court said that the effect of those incidents on the outcome should have been studied. The Appeals Court's order for a new trial was left standing by the Supreme Court.

U.S. Program to Track Down Delinquent Fathers Pays Off with a money bill, which is approved automatically when adopted by the Commons.

WASHINGTON, March 21 (WP). — The new federal-state 'runaway fathers" program has helped states collect $1.6 billion over the last two years by tracing absent fathers and making them support their children—at a cost of $457 million to the federal state and local governments.

While some fathers are too poor to pay, the program's deputy director, Louis Hays, said that tracers had discovered plenty of well-to-do fathers. In Sacramento, officials in one nonsupport action discovered that the father was a retired military officer who was collecting both a pension and a salary from a second job, with a total income of $60,000 a year. In Michigan, a law student who had divorced his wife years earlier and fallen $5,000 behind on $30-a-month child-support paymerts was tracked down when his family went on welfare. He had advanced considerably in his profession-he was now a judge. Also in Michigan, a man who had been ordered to pay $100 a month in child support was $13,-000 in arrears. His family went on welfare. He was later found to be an official of an aircraft manufacturing company in California. When he learned that officials were after him, he hired an attorney and sent $10,000 as a down payment on his arrears. "He's now caught up and current in his payments," said Mr. Hays.

Half Can Pay Mr. Hays said that, while statistics are not complete, at least half of the fathers tracked down "have the capacity to pay some reasonable level of child support and some have rather substantial incomes. State officials say some doctors and lawyers making up to $100,000 a year have been evading child support. Not a high percentage, but a few hundred.'

Some states are reaping big dividends. California collected $141 million last year, Pennsylvania $156 million.

Four years ago, when Sen. Rus-sell Long, D-La., pushed through an amendment creating a federal program to track down runaway fathers of welfare children, there was much sniggering and huffing from his critics.

One of the nation's leading social experts said: "What's the point? Most of these men have no money to collect any-

Today, no one is sniggering. About 1 million parents who otherwise would pay nothing are now making payments. The program is now bringing in more than $1 billion a year in childsupport payments for welfare mothers or other families from which the father has disappeared or refused to support the children. That is about 10 per cent of the entire national cost of the program of aid to families with dependent children.

Southeast Asian Natural Gas Stimulated by U.S. Shortage

By George McArthur

SINGAPORE, March 21,-While the United States has a shortage of natural gas, Southeast Asia is sitting on vast undeveloped fields of the resource.

"The solution seems obvious to me," said an official from the state of Western Australia, where a $2-billion liquefled natural gas (LNG) project is planned. The Indonesian national oil company, Pertamina, already has contracted to ship LNG to Califormia beginning in the early 1980s, and it is looking to the United States for a still larger market. So is Petronas, the national oil company of Malaysia, which also has vast reserves of natural gas.

reserves sufficient only for domestic development, is hoping for new discoveries and is giving the United States a long-range look. The optimistic outlook for LNG projects was one of the few cheerful notes of a just-concluded Southeast Asia conference that drew about 7,000 oilmen and experts to Singapore.

Even Thalland, which now has

Apart from LNG prospects, the oilmen had little to be enthusias-tic about. Although Southeast Asia is believed to have about 10 per cent of the world's oil reserves, offshore exploration has been stalled since 1976. It is picking up again very slowly.

.This has focused interest on the large and already known natural gas fields, which had received little attention while oil was cheap. Most gas at the cperating oil fields was simply "flared"—burned away.

Flaring now is largely forbidden and the oil-exporting matiers oil prices. of the region are carrfully adding up their natural gas reserves. It is estimated that Malaysia has about 18 trillion cubic feet and Indonesia has 23 trillion cubic feet in two fields alone, Officials believe far greater amounts are

So fer there is no comprehensive estimate of the amount byreath Australia's Northwest Shelf but one Western Australian offic'al exulted; "We believe we have scmething of a magnitude unequaled in the world; it will be greater than the North Sea project."

The continuing health of all three projects depends in good on decisions being weighed by President Carter's new Department of Energy. It must decide on a permissible price for imported LNG-which certainly will be at least onethird more expensive than Cansdian or Mexican natural gas-and also how much will be im-

The decisions are complicated by Mr. Carter's desire to increase U.S. domestic production and keep LNG prices separate from crude oil prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The LNG deal with Indonesia is now being held up because the United States refuses to accept a "price escalation clause" that would tie LNG prices in some measure to OPEC crude

At any rate, oil industry officials in Asia are confident that the continuing U.S. shortage inevitably will open the market in the United States. The immediste problem is that only Indonesia can presently guarantee delivery dates and specified quan-

Under the agreement with Southern California Gas Co. and Pacific Gas and Electric, Indo-nesia would deliver 539 million cubic feet daily for 20 years, beginning early in the 1980s.

An official of one of the U.S. companies involved in production said delivery could easily begin in 1981 if the unsettled contract details are worked out soon.

Although Australia's Northwest Shelf project appears to have even greater promise, it remains uncertain at the moment. A $50million 18-month project study is just getting started and meanwhile the needed $2 billion in financing is being sought from London banks. The final go-aheac decision will be made next year

The Malaysians' problem is political. Their big field at Bintulu. off the coast of Sarawak, originally was scheduled to begin producing in 1979. The schedule has now been set back to about 1983. but the erratic negotiating performance of Petronas makes officials question that date.

Petronas is engaged in bitter negotiations with Shell and the Japanese firm Mitsubishi over the financing of the $2-billion installation needed at Bintulu. The two firms have grudgingly accepted 35 per cent of the joint venture but the negotiations are complicated by other issues.

Meanwhile, Petronas, which overconfidently ordered from France six LNG tankers in 1974, will get the first tanker next year with one following each succeeding year.

New MERIT gives all the flavor you've ever wantedat a very low tar level.

By isolating certain 'key' flavor ingredients of cigarette smoke, ingredients that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar, researchers at Philip Morris have developed a way to pack flavor - incredible flavor - into a cigarette without the usual increase in tar.

It was about the toughest problem in cigarette history -- and it took Philip Morris researchers a full twelve years to solve it. It was done by analysing the flavor ingredients in tobacco and selecting only those elements that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

Only after exhaustive tests was the perfect blend achieved. A cigarette called MERIT, with a new enriched flavor process.

And then Philip Morris tested it on a massive scale. Thousands of smokers in the USA were asked to taste-test MERIT against the main competition. Smokers were asked to choose the richest tasting cigarette from a number of well known brands.

The results were sensational and more than justified those twelve hard years in formulating MERIT. A substantial majority of the smokers tested said that MERIT delivered more flavor, in some cases, than cigarettes carrying 50%

Needless to say all the high hopes for MERIT have now been justified by the success of its US launch - in a short space of time MERIT has taken off in the States and achieved in the words of the leading authority the most successful new introduction ever in the US:*

Tyre and Terror

That the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon stopped short of capturing Tyre makes a rather important point. For Tyre was where that terrorist raid was launched which began the whole Lebanese incursion. with its hundreds of dead and thousands of refugees. Israel crossed the border into its northern neighbor to stamp out Palestinian terrorism—but did not take Tyre.

Actually, of course, Israel did uproot most of the Palestinians from southern Lebanon and does have territory to exchange for guarantees against their return. But the pprooting will not end Palestinian guerrilla and terror activities—it was the uprooting of the Palestinians in the earlier wars that has given drive and goals to their activists today. And who can possibly guarantee Israel against terror arising in southern Lebanon, or northern Lebanon, or Syria, or the West Bank itself?

No state can be guaranteed against terror. In Italy and West Germany it is the product of a violent elite which believes it knows better what the masses need than do the masses. In Northern Ireland it is a more active form of nationalism than the nations concerned desire. And if a Palestinian entity were created it would probably not satisfy all the Palestinians—there would be Provos who would want much more, and blow up marketplaces to prove it.

But if such an entity were brought into being at least some, probably many, of the Palestinians would have a homeland; they would seek to make it flourish and might become more interested in that than in dreams of other boundaries. To Israel, such a prospect is hardly inviting. But is it not better than the present complete uncertainty in which Palestinians live? Israel's neighbors, too, who have perennial difficulties with the refugees, might well aid in working to create an at least relatively stable home

Pushing Palestinians back from the immediate frontier will not solve their problem, or Israel's. Terror can spring up anywhere and be dispatched anywhere. Much of its force depends on the basic justice of the cause for which terror fights, however badly terror may serve that cause. And the Palestinians do have a cause, however poorly it may be represented by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Tyre, therefore, may be regarded as a kind of twisted symbol of an intricate dilemma. It is a challenge to Israel to recognize that its security does not depend wholly on topography; it is a challenge to the Arab states to acknowledge that the Middle East needs a lecure Israel; it is a challenge to the international community to work for a fundamental stability for all peoples in that

Bhutto's Death Sentence

The death sentence given former Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, convicted for ordering a rival's assassination, poses a stark choice between the demands of law and the demands of politics. His trial was public and lengthy and held in conformance with the law of the land; Mr. Bhutto can yet appeal and ask the government for clemency. But even though the principles of accountability and legality are thus being respected, a certain basic political "law" is not. Mr. Bhutto still claims substantial numbers of followers, and many of them see his sentence, as they saw his arrest and trial, as an expression of vengeance. The disturbances reported on Monday in several Pakistani cities offer a taste of the form their continued alienation could take. The military leadership is not so firmly in command as to tempt that sort of trouble without a second thought.

We hope the government of Gen. Zia does give that second thought. We do so not with the thought that the crime of which Mr. Bhutto was convicted is not serious or that he is innocent or that his trial was fraudulent. What troubles us is that it is asking a great deal of Mr. Rhutto's still substantial constituency to expect them to accept that the process by which justice has been meted out to Mr. Bhutto is untinged by politics. For all of his real and imagined misdeeds and flaws of character and policy, Mr. Bhutto did have political legitimacy: He was the people's choice. The generals do not have that legitimacy, and they are therefore at a great disadvantage in convincing Mr. Bhutto's supporters that what is happening

In the very different circumstances surrounding President Ford's pardon of President Nixon, essentially political grounds were found for sparing the disgraced president the full rigors of the judicial process. The argument was that the country had seen sufficient upheaval during the period leading up to Mr. Nixon's resignation and that the public interest in tranquillity and a return to normalcy would be better served by pardon than by a series of trials. That is not to say that the pardon was universally approved or that the Pakistanis should or can follow literally that particular U.S. example. It is to say that Americans are in a good position to appreciate the moral and legal and political complexities of the passage the Pakistani government is entering now.

Soviet Arms Buildun

Historic defense statements by President Carter over the weekend mark a striking change in his attitude to Soviet military expansion. "Excessive Soviet buildop . . . Massive forces that could be used for political blackmail and threaten our vital interests . . . seeking to dominate those around them . . . ominous use of Soviet military power, with mercenaries from other Communist countries, to intervene in local conflicts, as in Africa . . . " This is a far cry indeed from the Carter who pledged himself to cut the defense budget, who appointed the "dove" Paul Warnke as his chief arms negotiator, and whose defense policy, although not really "wet." was disconcertingly dampish in several key areas.

Carter and Begin

Tough talking between President Carter and Menachem Begin was expected even before their meeting was postponed as a result of the el-Fatah incursion into Israel. Now, one week later, following Israel's invasion of the south of Lebanon there is a possibility of an angry confrontation that will not be disguised in any way by the familiar references to the special friendship between the two countries. The scale and ruthlessness of the Israeli operation in Lebanon, going far beyond traditional Israeli retaliation against the Palestinians, may have killed off the peace initiative launched by President Sadat of Egypt which was already foundering-causing growing friction between Washington and Jerusalem in the process. -From the Financial Times (London).

Death Sentence for Bhutto

· If Mr. Bhutto were to be executed it would inevitably be seen not as a just punishment but as the cold-blooded elimination of a dangerous political opponent-ironically the very crime of which Mr. Bhutto has been convicted . . . It would make the restoration of civil peace within Pakistan harder rather than easier. It would make Mr. Bhutto a martyr for his followers among the illiterate masses, and would probably also alienate many of the educated people who until now felt no sympathy for him. It would render the present rulers in their turn criminals in the eyes of a large section of public opinion, and might well inaugurate a cycle of political vengeance from which it would be hard to escape. No doubt Gen Zia-the military ruler of Pakistan-will have the wisdom to spare his country and himself these added-

France: A New Stage

The spectacular victory of the majority does not mean the recently held elections will be placed in parentheses and that life will continue as before. The great stirring of ideas, of hopes, of worries, the demands and the promises, even the modifying of the political balance that is shown by the ballot box indicates—quite to the contrary—that France enters a new stage in its long evolution. What one can say, on the other hand, is that this new stage will be more pleasurable than that which could have been expected had the left won. Even if a social crisis arises from the distilusionment and dejection of those who placed excessive hopes in the Socialist-Communist camps, the · French economy will, in any case, hereafter rapidly find its balance, particularly in regards to employment . . .

WASHINGTON—Peter Jay, Her Britannic Majesty's new ambassador to the United States, is something very different in the way of envoys from the United only 40 years old and has no previous diplomatic experience. It is not that he is a journalist rather than a professional politician or foreign-service careerist. It is not even that he is the sonin-law of Prime Minister James Callaghan, though this relationship drew teers of nepotism from opposition benches when the appointment was announced and obviously gives the ambassador ready access to the center of backhome power.

What really makes Jay unique in the line of British ambassadors is his record of sharp disagree-ment with the basic economic policies of past Labor governments and indeed with the Keynesian leanings of all Western democracies' since the Great Degression, the United States included. As a journalist specializing in economic affairs. Jay ceaselessly warned his country in print and television that it was risking the kind of inflation that wrecked the German economy and brought Hitler to power. And what Britain was doing, he said, was also being done by other Western European countries and the United States.

In Opposition?

While such opinions would seem to place Jay in opposition to the Labor party and the government that sent him to Washsistency between his views and the government's now that it has faced up to the menace of inflation and is doing something

What Jay thinks of the tentative inflation-control efforts of the Carter administration he sayeth not. A tyro diplomat he may be, but he is not about to find fault with the government to which he is accredited. Yet much of what he has written in the past would curi the hair of George Meany and the Democratic liberals in Congress. Jay will not be reading them any lectures. He speaks only approvingly of the Carter administration when he speaks of it at

Jay contributed an essay to a book titled "The Future That Doesn't Work: Social Democracy's Failure in Britain," published in 1977. He now explains that it was excerpted from a lecture he had previously delivered to the Institute of Economic Affairs. It was an analysis of the economic situation in Britain at the time it was written and not intended to be engraved on stone for the ages. "I stand by it," he says. But events are catching it up. In a speech at the National Press Chub shortly after his errival in Washington, Jay assured his audience that Britain had changed direction and was now headed out of the inflation woods. not deeper into them. The turning point, he believes, was Callashan's speech to the Labor party conference in 1976, in which the Prime Minister "threw Keynes out the window."

The thesis of Jav's essay is that the unemployment-inflation dilemma creates a sort of politicoeconomic Catch-22 High unemployment is unacceptable to the British electorate, as it is to the voters in other democratic countries. The result is that candidates for elective office tend to outpromise each other in programs designed to restore full employment by fiscal and monetary means. Once in office, they try to redeem their campaign pledges, and worsening inflation is the inevitable consequence. Jay's essay sums it up this way:

"We reach the depressing conclusion that the operation of free democracy appears to force governments into positions (the commitment to full employment) that prevent them from taking steps (fiscal and monetary restraint) that are necessary to arrest the menace (accelerated infletion) that threatens to undermine the condition (stable prosperity) on which political stability and therefore liberal democracy depend."

He goes on to say that the unless new discoveries are made within five to 10 years. Ways the oil revenue to modernize industrial plants are under study.

Meanwhile, most unions are again accepting a regimen of wage restraints for the next two years. The new formula calls for increased wages on a descending scale—down to 4 per cent in the second year. With the inflation rate now shrunk to a one-digit figure, the pressure for more generous increases is expected to ease. Not all unions accept the new arrangement, as the recent strike of firemen demonstrated. The firemen's union demanded a catch-up 30per-cent boost in pay scale, but the government stood firm and won a 10-per-cent settlement.

Less Strikes

The present rate of unemployment in England is 5 per cent, which corresponds roughly with the somewhat higher rate in this country, the British method of computation being different from ours. Britain suffered fewer strike interruptions of production in 1976 than in any of the previous 20 years, and its record of continuous production was better than that of any Western democracy, including the United States. save only West Germany.

How much Jay's preachments as financial editor of the Times of London and as host of a weektelevision talk show had to do with the government's hard decision to climb down on inflation is not measurable, and Jay it. But he must take some satisfaction from evidence that British democracy, though it still has its troubles, no longer itself by the tall . . . eating itself outrageous.

LONDON. - This summer the Northeast coast of America will be like the Costa Brava" -Freddie Laker, the pioneer of cheap fares across the Atlantic. predicted to me two months ago. Already, the last quarter of last year, when the cheap fares began, showed a 21-per-cent increase in British travelers to the United States over the previous year.

Since then the air battle has intensified, the dollar has fallen, and Europeans have rushed to book tickets for the United States. Last week, the fares reached a low with British Airways charging only £63 ($122) for a flight to Washington. But this transatlantic boom, welcome though it is, only accentuates the probabilitive cost of European travel and the sad consequences for European unity.
With the low fares and the falling dollar, the Europeans have begun to realize, rather belatedly, that the United States is the ideal tourist country for the inhabitants of a crowded continent in search of lebensraum. The entire coastline of West Germany is shorter (and a great deal colder in summer) than the coastline of many single states, like Massa-chusetts; and the empty beaches of Martha's Vineyard or Santa Barbara have no equivalent in Western Europe. Even the beach at Santa Monica, right next door to Los Angeles, is far less crowded and less developed than the French Riviera.

Cheaper in U.S. It is not only getting to the United States that is cheaper: It is staying there, compared to inflationary Europe. For families with children the whole business of casual travel is far simpler and chesper—with the informal motels, the quick restaurants, the cheap gasoline than moving through hotels in most Europea countries. And while most U.S. cities may not be the European's idea of cultural tourism, they are all compensated for by New York, which each year becomes more cosmopolitan and more inviting to visitors, as it gradually changes its chief role, from the financial ospital to the tourist capital of the world; and West Germans, Italians and Japanese compete not only to stay there, but to buy up bits of it.

So far, so good. The tourist migrations across the Atlantic are only sensible at a time when Europe in August is increase costly and overcrowded; and this new rush across the Atlantic may do much to make Europeans understand the Americans better. But what about Europeans understanding each other? With each new drop in U.S. ek fares, the cost of flying within Europe be-travel in the old pattern of elitism. and it has become not a democ ratizing influence, but a new kind of class division.

Why Different?

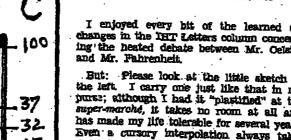

The European airlines insist that the scheduled flights must charge what the traffic will bear. and that the cheaper fares will not correspondingly increase the number of passengers. But the rush of new transatiantic passen-gers has so far disproved this theory with respect to the United States: Why should Europe be different?

The fact is that the high cost of travel in Europe is the consequence of agreements between nationalized airlines which are very close to cartels. It is just | this kind of restriction that the European community was sopposed to break up-both through generally encouraging competition and through its specific transport policy. The response to the sir travel scandal from the EEC in Brussels has so far been minimal. But here surely is an opportunity. for the Community to take up a cause which would have an immediate appeal to European consumers—just the kind of cause to stimulate interest in direct elections—and to show that European unity is not just a question of new regulations and communiques but a policy enabling ordinary Europeans to move through their own continent as easily as through their own country.

'Equus': Freudianism Without the Staging

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

and the Hautefeuille in English) is the screen version of Peter. Shaffer's play, a sort of mail-order course in the theories of psychosnalysis. The original enjoyed success in London, New York and Paris, but less, one suspects, on the grounds of its literary merits (which are scant) than for John Dexter's ingenious staging.

In his play, Shaffer recounted the motives that led to a singularly repulsive crime of cruelty. An adolescent from a small English town is taken into custody for having blinded six horses at a riding academy where he was employed as a stable boy. He is judged unbalanced and is handed over to a psychiatrist for exami-

During the lengthy analysis the spotlight fastens on the doctor. He is another case. Wretched in his marriage, he begins to share his patient's fantasies and finds ie mythological roots in compulsive equine worship.

Shaffer's handling of this double exercise in Freudian investigation often borders on the ridiculous and its dramaturgy is extremely shaky. He is unequal to the writing of the lyrical passages, and when the boy, in a frenzy of ecstasy, mounts a charger and expresses his delight, the author leaves him with earthbound exclamations. Pahst's "Secrets of the Soul," made in collaboration with the Freudian Dr. Hans Sachs, demonstrated the application of psychoanalytical methods far more clearly and

In "The Betsy" (at the Mer-cury, the Public's Saint Germain and the Studio Alpha in English) Walter Bernstein and William Bast have sought to pass what must be a very long novel by Harold Robbins through the scenario strainer. As it covers the history of several generations of a family engaged in automobile manufacture, relating their business and private affairs in considerable detail, the job has obviously been a difficult one. It is to the credit of Bernstein and Bast that one usually knows who is who.

entry at the Paris Opera, and a very grand entry it was-more befitting the 19th-century splendor of the Palais Garnier than the emotional directness of Monteyerdi's music, but a striking spectacle all the same. In any production of "Poppea"

there are some fundamental decisions to be made, given the absence of instrumentation and other performance clues in the score. Paris opted for Raymond Leppard's realization of the music, with its mixture of old and modern instruments and an approach intended to appeal-like Günther Rennert's staging--"to the contemporary sensibility." The Paris Opéra also laid on a cast of imposing dimensions, one that would have suited a revival of some major Verdi work, but whose sheer vocal weight seemed to be overkill in this dramatic, but delicate and supple music. Jon Vickers, a tenor whose experience ranges from Handel to Pritten, brought an almost pathological intensity to the role of Nero, imperiously dominating the stage but often adopting a viclently declamatory style that overpowered the music. Gwyneth Jones was a Poppea beautiful to behold in a succession of Jose Va-

Within this framework, Rennert, who is no stranger to the work, set forth a highly uneven staging that ranged from eloquent simplicity, such as the scene of Seneca's farewell to his disciples and in the final love scene, to ham-handed comedy, which got completely out of hand in the drunken episode of Nero and Lucano (Michel Senechal) celebrating Seneca's obliging suicide. In any case, this scene would have gained in impact if it had not been separated by an intermission from the scene of Seneca's death. Julius Rudel conducted flexibly, spaciously and with much attention to detail. As the trio of allegorical figures in the prologue, Valerie Masterson, Isabel Garcisanz and Danièle Perriers got off to a slow start but found their vocal bearings by the time they reappeared, respectively, as Drusilla, Pallade and Damigelia. Joceiyne Taillon was vocally ripe and expertly comic as Poppea's vicariously ambitious nurse.

Ginger Rogers Sings Her Story

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, March 21 (IHT),... Among performers the term "pro" is the ultimate encomium, more complimentary; even, than "genius," reflecting achievement rather than endowment.

Ginger Rogers, opening a twoweek stay at the Palladium last night, offered about as compelling an example as can well be imagined of all that "professionalism" implies. She sang, she danced, she talked, she joked, she camped a bit and hammed a bit. of poise and pace and proportion. She shares with Peggy Lee the ability to make everything seem inevitable while leaving nothing to chance.

Her show is essentially an autobiographical trip down memory lane, following her career from the time she became Texas state Charleston champion through "Girl Crazy" on Broadway, the pictures with Fred Astaire and other pictures, including her Oscar-winning "Kitty Foyle," and back to the stage in "Hello Dolly"

Much of it is engagingly told

And so last night did Ginger Rogers's singing of "Embraceable You," "But Not for Me," "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off," "The Continental" and many more.

As with Astaire, it's not the voice, nor even the tracing of a memorable melody, but rather the way with the words, distinctly, eloquently and affectionately articulated, every accent and nuance just right, and in the right place. singer who also denced and she left one suspecting that he probably always was.

She had a huge succes, as mov-ing, probably, for her as for an audience glowing in fond remembrance of both songs and singer. It was especially moving for one that audience both old and lucky enough to have heard her singing "Embraceable You" and "But Not for Me" at the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia in 1930 when "Girl Crazy" was on its way to Broadway and Ginger Rogers on her way to one of Hollywood's great careers.

"May" is "the grimly witty account" of the decline of an excon who "knows the world is crooked and behaves accordingly, Vincent Carby says. "Stages," directed by Richard Foreman, tries to "fuse the theater of the absurd with the theater of the sentimental," Richard Eder says. It is about a dy-ing actor, recalling five crises of his life. In turn, he is a playmediocre play, a blacklisted per-former fighting McCarthyism, a millionaire striving to presess his wife, a sick man in a canitarium and finally the proprietor of a haberdashery wrecked by de-mons. The sketches of this "lugubrious vaudeville," written by Stuart Ostrow, differ widely in style and quality, Eder says. Their only common link is Jack Warden's "quite brilliant" lead-

Warning Strikes Staged in Munich

BONN, March 21 (Reuters) .-Labor strife in the West German metal industry spread today from the Stuttgart area to Munich, where 15,000 automobil? and arcreft workers staged warning strikes to demand an 8-percent pay increase, a union spokesman said.

Manufacturers in Baden-Wuerttemberg State yesterday locked out 230,000 metalworkers in retallation for selective strikes called by the union in Stuttgart and other places.

Today's warning strikes in Munich hit the BMW motor works and the Messerschmitt-Borlkow-Blohm aircraft

Hvatt Cets Takeover Offer

Hyatt Corp., which manages hotels, motels and estamants in the United States, and Hyatt International Corp., which manages hotels outside the United States, has received an 386 million takeover, offer from the Pritskers, a vealthy Chicagofamily with interests in hotels operated by Hyatt. The Pritsers, who already own 35 per cent of Hyatt Curp, and 55 per cent of Hyatt International, are offering to pay $15 a share for the remaining Hyatt Corp. stock and $9 a share for the remainder of Hyatt International. Hyatt says the offer might involve all cash or a combination of cash and securities. It says a committee of independent directors will study the offer before seeking approval from holders of a majority of the shares not held by the Pritzkers.

East-Bloc Western Loans Rise $5 Billion

GENEVA, March 21 (AP-DJ) .-The Soviet Union and other Bast European nations increased their borrowing in the West last year by $5 billion, bringing the East's total debt position to about $40 billion, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe

(ECE) reported today.

Largely by reducing imports, the East also cut its trade deficit with the West to shout $5 billion from $7.4 billion the previous year, the ECE said in its annual report on the Eastern economies. East-West trade volume dropped 3 per cent in the year, and given the singgish economic recovery in the West and the East's effort.

level in 1977 as in 1978_46.1 billion. The peak borrowing was $8.6 billion in 1975. The ECE said that this lower level of borrowing reflected the shrinking of currentaccount deficits, stepped-up gold sales and a lowering of assets held in Western banks. It said that, balancing assets against liabilities, the East's debts totaled $24.4 billion at the end of last June, up from $21.3 billion at the end of 1976. About 33 per cent of this debt was accounted for by the Soviet Union, 24 per cent by Poland, and 14 per cent by East

The REC said the Eastern countries "have been increasingly supplementing their traditional recourse to state-guaranteed export credit facilities with credit lines with corresponding banks, direct benk-to-bank loans, radiscounting of trade bills and borrowing from international bank syndicates." It added that East European

The UN agency also said that Rast Ruropean imports may recover in 1978 because they will need to step up purchases of grain this year. Easter Economies Slowed

Overall economic growth in the Past slowed, falling below planned targets, the ECE added. The Soviet Union's net material product growth—the measure used economic growth—fell to 3.5 per cent last year, below its 5 per cent the previous year.

Poland's rate of growth at 5.6 per cent in 1977 was, as planued ower than in 1976. Hungary largely exceeded its planned target by expanding 8 per cent Czechoslovakia's growth at 45 per cent was below plan, while East Germany was rather more successful at 5.2 per cent. Romania did the best of all with an 8.6-percent growth rate, but this was well below its target of 11.3 per cent and was below 10 per cent for the first time since 1970.

Bulgaria recorded a growth rate of 6.3 per cent and now has set its 1978 target at 6.8 per cent.

Goods Orders Up in U.S. by 2.5% in Month

Follows a Decline Of 5.9% in January

WASHINGTON, March 21 (Reuters).—New orders received by manufacturers of durable goods rose $1.53 billion, or 2.5 per cent, to a seasonally adjusted $63.79 bil-Ecn in February, the Commerce Department said today.

That compared with a revised drop of $3.91 billion, or 5.9 per cent, in January, which was originally reported as a 4.4-per-cent

February shipments rose $2.34 billion, or 4 per cent, to $61.22 billion after a January decline of 45 per cent.

The backlog of unfilled orders rose $2.57 billion, or 1.4 per cent, to $191.17 billion after a 1.8-percent rise in January.

The department said durable goods orders have been volatile in recent months due to defense spending. The average change over the last three months have been up 3.9 per cent for orders, up 1.7 per cent for shipments and up 2 per cent for unfilled

The department said new orders for transportation equipment, which rose 7 per cent above Jannary, accounted for about two-thirds of the latest increase. New orders for non-defense capital goods, considered a key indicator of future plant and equipment spending, rose 2.3 per cent.

Diamonds Are Best Friend To Speculators, Hedgers NEW YORK, March 21 (IHT).-Diamonds are becoming reasingly popular with investors, staying away from the bearish New York markets, and speculators, wanting to cash in on an up market before it turns down. As a result, the and the New York-based retail jewelry chain Tiffany Co. are now warning prospective customers that diamond prices are now warning prospective vustomers that diamond prices are unrealistically high.

Rough diamonds are commanding premiums as high as 40 per cent in such major cuiting centers as Amsterdam, Lordon, Antwerp, Belgium, Haifa, Israel, and New York

Industry sources said the speculation was being fed by soaring demand at a time when the dollar is weak and the New York stock market sluggish.

DeBeers, warning that it might impose surcharges on some of its transactions on top of its 17-per-cent increase announced in December, appears disturbed by the steep premiums offered by speculators on uncut diamonds that it had sold to its regular trade customers.

"If speculative trading continues to produce substantial premiums in the cutting centers," DeBeers said, "our central selling organization will be obligd to take action to insure that the producers for whom it acts receive the benefits of the Walter Hoving, chairman of Tiffany, has charged that the major European diamond cutters "are trying to corner the market, hoping to cash in on the lack of confidence in securities and are withholding supplies from the American wholesale and retail trade." In an advertisement in Friday's New York Times, Tiffany asserted that "Diamonds are too high... some speculators have driven diamond prices too high. We suggest you look before you lesp." However, Mr. Hoving denied that Tiffany was urging consumers not to buy diamonds now.

DeBeers maintains speculative trading has carried open market prices to levels which are not justified in relation to prices at consumer level.

"Stocks at inflated prices have accumulated in the cutting centers," it says, "and are largely financed by bank credit which is now at a level substantially higher than that needed to finance the normal working of the industry. The market should be alert to the dangers inherent in the situation.

Dollar Gains Sharply, Gold Price Falls

LONDON, March 21 (AT-DI). -The dollar rose relatively sharply today.

W. Germans Seek Data

FRANKFURT, March 21 (Reuters).—Bundesbank vice-president Karl Otto Poehl said today shat talks are being held to persuade West German banks to draw up quarterly consolidated balance sheets, showing the activities of foreign subsidiaries. The aim is to increase the openness of the banks' foreign activities.

Report from Number One Wall Street

Witold S. Sulimirski, Vice President,

An international

Dresence. "Today, any U.S. company with annual sales of $100 million plus is to some extent multi-national," says Witold Sulimirski, man-ager of the Europe Area. "And for any company doing business abroad, the laying is abroad.

We have branch offices in London, Frankfurt, Tokyo, Singapore and Taipei; representative offices in Paris, Beirur, Teheran, Hong Kong, Melbourne, Buenos Aires, Caracas, and Rio de laneiro; and affiliate financial institutions on all continents.

The Irving provides a wide range of services to corporate customers abroad. Our principal business is financing, both short and medium term, in any major currency. Many companies also come to us for the rapid movement of funds across national borders, for foreign exchange transactions, for money market and investment information."

Sulimirski sums up the Irving's strength this way: "With outposts in key financial centers and with an experienced New York based staff that travels around the globe to attend to the needs of customers, we are well placed to assist your company, anywhere."

A major bank. At 36/38 Cornhill, in the heart of the financial district that Londoners call the City, stands the Irving's London branch office. This branch is a major commercial bank in its own right with current assets that now exceed $1.5 billion.

"Our mission in London," says

General Manager James M. Stewart, is to serve the needs of corporate business, both resident and

For resident companies, a rypical assignment might be to explore a direct investment program in the U.S. Irving specialists in London, working with their counterparts at Irving headquarters in New York. provide counsel and assistance on such alternatives as acquisition, joint venture or establishing a de novo operation. For non-resident companies, assignments might include providing a comprehensive analysis of the companys overseas organization, sales volume, inventory policy and control; reporting and budgeting net assets or liability position in foreign currencies; evaluating capital expenditure programs and sources of local financing.

"Whatever the assignment, says Stewart, "our clients know that at the Irving they'll find the experience and the commitment to get the job done right."

A key financial center. "We're in Frankfurt for a number of good reasons," says James W. Scanlan, the Irving's Director for Europe, resident in Frankfurt.

James W. Scanlan, Jr., Vice President.

"It is a major financial center in a country with a very stable economy and a strong currency. Many multinational corporations are represented here, including over 200 American ones. From Frankfurt we also have easy access to clients throughout Germany, as well as in Switzerland, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Austria.

"At our Frankfurt Branch," says Scanlan, "we offer a full range of commercial banking services. Among them is foreign exchange. Our dealing room maintains daily contact with international treasurers of major corporations in Cermany. We keep them abreast of up to the minute developments, as well as longer term fundamentals."

Complementing this personalized service, Frankfurt Branch distributes to its customers the Irving's Foreign Exchange Market Trends, which is published by the Economic Research and Planning Division in New York and available in both English and German.

ABOUT MEN

By Phyllis Chesler, Simon & Schuster, Mustrated. 281 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by John Leonard

PHYLLIS CHESLER, the author of "Women and Madness" and professor of psychology at the City University of New York has written a brave. sad, disorderly, sometimes selfindulgent, often infuriating, always provocative book.

The disorderliness and the selfindulgence are its higgest problems. It lacks the coherence and control of, say, Susan Brown-miller's "Against Our Will." It flails and keens. It seems somehow hasty, or alapped arbitrarily together, variously composed of grim reminiscences, literary snippets, newspaper chippings, productions with critical captions and prose meditations tor-interviews with men, art retured almost but not quite to the point of poetry. I'm remindunfortunately and inappropriately, of Norman Mailer when the vapors take him. Still a reviewer, especially a male reviewer, ought to attend to the broad outline of the argument. Many male reviewers of Miss Brownmiller's book, for example, indulged themselves by animadverting on her interpretation of the Emmett Till story, instead of consulting their own demons-what other demons could we consult?-to ask if what she said was generally, admissibly, true. Had we consulted our demons I think we would have to admit that yes, the rapefantasy was among them, or a: least used to be. We might then have been in a position to reply that most of our fantasies involve doing violence to other men And that precisely is Dr.

Chesler's basic argument. Sons long for the love and protection of their fathers, and usually don't get it. Fathers are off fighting with other men, at work and war. Sons will grow up punishing the women in their lives for what their fathers failed to give them, and for the frustrations of their own work. Complicating the scenario, according to Dr. Chesler, is "uterus-envy." She more or less sums up: "I see the terrifying battle between fathers and sons-which most sons have always lost—confirmed: I see how every day Eve is punished again for man's anguish over Paradise Lost—and for her childbearing abilities."

Elsewhere she says: 'Male emotions of rage, outrage, jealousy, and shame—toward more powerful men-are laid to rest. or acted out, in women's beds, or in pornographic sexual fantasie Pacifying sexual organs help men avoid the even greater excesses-of fratricide or patricide that would otherwise surely occur in the 'dark Satenic mills of male employment or on the male battlefields of war."

Aside from uterus-envy-which any more than I've ever been to secure for my conscious mind an admission of that popular subconscious desire Gdipus complex—I think Dr. Chesler is quite right, and her formulation helps explain much of the evidence she cites on how sad males feel after sex, how hard we find it to talk about our feelings (especially to other men), how much we seem to need some sort of hierarchical order.

On pornography, Dr. Chesler is superb. On male homosexuality, she is going to get herself into trouble with the cadres of various liberation movements. (She suggests that it is "related to a desire to solve the psychopolitical war between fathers and sons" and "to defuse the escalation of male-male rivalry by eliminating women as a basis for competition," as well as being one way of resolving the Œdipal dilemma.) On the art she reproduces, she is invariably pertinent in her comments, and just 45 invariably ideological and reductive. We do, though, get some sense of why Athena had to come out of Zeus's head instead of a lower region; why it was necessity in invent a Maconna, and why, according to Michelangelo, the creation was man-to-man, finger-to-finger. Nevertheless, much of this book is an impulsive mess. Considering the literature on fathers, sons, brothers and male friends, her snippets are skimpy. Why, among the myths and art, so much of the West and so little of the Orient, where the same problems presumably a p p l y — especially since Dr. Chesler was once mar-ried to an Oriental. But then her accounts of the men in her life are also skimpy, brutal, fingernail-parines. And how many men did she interview, under what pretext, from which socioeconomic backgrounds?

I can imagine half a dozen other possible reasons for Jewish circumcision besides menstruation-envy. One begins with hygiene. No, women aren't always masochistic and men always sadistic. Nor for a moment do I admit that men-she does not qualify a particle—"men believe that women are not human beings." She provokes and despairs

Listen: Much is made here of the mighty mythic penis, in art architecture and machinery. (Dr. Chesler might also have mentioned such symbolic sets of male sex organs as the triangle of Pythagoras, the trinity of Christ and the triad of Hegelian dialectic.) Maybe, just maybe, the 20th century proposes some contrary myths. Consider, besides the caves and the seas, the ambivalence of the helicopter, the explicitness of geodesic domes. the shopping mall, McDonald's golden arches, baseball stadiums, the cyclotron and "field" theory. e for NBA Playoff Spots

By Paul Attner

HINGTON, March 21 cludes road games at Philadelphia, Phoenix, Los Angeles and makes them vulnerable. Championships Near Portland, Philadenhia Denver and San Antonio have the championships of their respective divisions all but wrapped up, but otherwise the playoff picture in both conferences is muddled. Eleven other teams are fighting for the remaining eight playoff In each conference, the six teams with the best records qualify. The division winners in each conference have first-round byes. The first-round pairings in each conference are the No. 3 team vs. No. 6 and No. 4 against No. 5. The winner of No. 3 vs. No. 6 plays No. 2 and the winner of No. 4 vs. No. 5 plays No. L As of yesterday, teams qualifying in the west (in order) would be Portland, Denver, Phoenix, Seattle, Los Angeles and Mil-waukee, in the East: Phila-delphia, San Antonio, Washing-

But in the West, Milwaukee is only slightly ahead of Chicago and Golden State for the sixth spot. And Phoenix, which once had the third-best record in the NBA, has shunped badly in the last three weeks and could be passed by both Seattle and Los Angeles for the No. 3 placement before the end of the season.

Cleveland Involved In the East, Washington and

New York likewise are staging a tussic for the No. 3 position and the resulting matchup with No. 6 in the playoff series. Cleveland, which had been struggling, has an outside chance of catching both the Knicks and

But the Cavaliers also have to watch their flank. Atlanta, which ranks as the NBA's surprise club, Injuries could determine how well all of these eastern clubs do. Atlanta has been playing without its leading scorer, John Drew, (sprained ankle) while Cleveland has been without Walt Frazier (bad toe). New Orleans has done remarkably well despite the absence of Pete Maravich (bad knee), who might try to play this week, either Tuesday against New Jersey or Wednesday against Washington.

The Rangers were first understood to have offered Nilsson and Hedberg a total of $1.8 million for two years but it was learned that the team signed the players Saturday to a two-year package worth $2.4 million. Nilsson and Hedberg would thus receive $600,000 a year each for two

The Jets' new owners, headed by Michael Gabouty, announced their hopes to match the Rangers' offer on Feb. 25, when they bought the team. They had 44 days after that to come up with the money.

"As we approached the deadline concerning the New York offer, we have not had sufficient assurance that we would gain entry into the NHL for the 1978-79 season," the Jets' owners said in a statement. "This dilemma makes it virtually impossible to compete with the New York of-

The loss of the two stars also was regarded as another blow to the World Hockey Association in its effort to survive against the entrenched National Hockey League. The signing may also serve to escalate salaries in the NHL, where players average $90,000 a year.

Goals and Assists Nilsson, 27, the WHA's secondleading scorer, is the league's top playmaker with 85 assists while Hedberg, also 27, leads the WHA in goals scored with 59. Karlier this season, Hedberg set a prohockey record by scoring 50 goals in less than 50 games. Hedberg and Nilsson have been playing for the Jets since they were signed as rookies four seasons ago. Hedberg is a right wing and Nilsson a center. Announcing the signing the Rangers general manager, John Ferguson, said, "The rap on them is they couldn't take the rough going. But that's not true. I'm very happy and very excited."

In his third year, Gilliam was so impressive in the exhibition games that Chuck Noil decided, "He deserves to start," Despite four victories, a loss and a wild 35-35 tie in Denver, the Steeler coach changed quarterbacks. Per-haps if Gilliam had been on a team that wasn't shooting for the Super Bowl or that didn't have two other capable quarterbacks in Bradshaw and Terry Hanratty, he would have received a longer loo.

A Swallow's Eye View of Major Leaguers

YUMA, Ariz., March 21 (NYT). When the Swallows come back to Yuma next year, they'll bring their own noodles again. These aren't the swallows who come back to Capistrano each year. These are the Yakult Swallows of the Japanese Central League, who nested here with the San Diego Padres for soring training.

They brought their own noodles and they prepared their own rice, making it mushler than Americans like it. Other than that, they thrived on American food, especially ham and eggs for

They also thrived on long workouts. They usually were on the field at Desert Stadium at 9 o'clock in the morning and they didn't depart until 4 in the afternoon, whereas the Padres per-spired from 10 to 2 until their exhibition games began last

Split the Schedule

After two victories and two losses against major-league onposition, the Swallows went home to Japan, but whenever they had a dull moment here many took films of the Padres hitting, pitching and fielding. In other moments, some talked of Joe Penitone, once of the New York Yankers and briefly with the Swallows once upon a time.

"What do you remember," little lefthanded pitcher named Takeshi Yasuda, a 17-game win-Joe Pepitone.'

When he heard the name, Yasuda smiled, and when the interpreter Don Hito, a 20-vear-old shortstop who had attended Cal Poly, translated the question, the lefthanded pitcher tapped his chest, then tapped his head.

"Great ballplayer, but he had a different way of thinking," the interpreter said. "He was kind of a lazy guy. He only played 10 games. Once he forgot his spikes and there wasn't another pair big enough to fit him so he said he couldn't play, but the manager told him to buy a new

Argentine Terrorism, Just for the Sport of It

The Soccer Scene

LONDON, March 21 (IHT) -What fale awaits the European scccer star in Argentina? The question of security, in its broadest sense, has exercised cur m'uis for montes now if not years and does so increasingly as the June World Cup accelerates toward us. Tonight, however, West Gental players preparing to play a match in Buenes Aires will be trying to control nerves affected less by terrorist threat, more by the very real danger of direct physical harm on the field of play.

Mouncheng adbach plays Boca Juniors champions of South America, for the unoffic'al we: d club championship tonight. This is a home-and-away fixture usually played by the Eurepean Cup winners and the Copa Libertadores of America, and there with even short memories will realize that Boruscia are not the champions of Europe.

Liverpool Refused

Bornesia volunteered to stand in when Liverpool refused to play the Argentines. Why? Liverpool's memory of the world club cham-Borustia's need of the glory and the estimated $40,000 proceeds from the Buenos Aires game the Liverpool's viewpoint was put succinctly by its manager, Bob Paisley: "I gave my directors a broad reason why we should not go to South America," he says. "It re is a grave risk of injury from physical involvement."

Does the man exaggerate? Consider for yourself. In 1987, the Glasgow Celtic goalkeeper Ronnie Simpson was injured by a stone hurled at his head even before the play began and finally four players from Celtic and two from Racing Club of Buenos Aires were sent off.

The Coltic Players, admitting they had been drawn to retalisting against brutality, were each fined $250 by their club, while the Racing Club men were rewarded with a new car.

Stitches for Charlica

That action must have stirred the mood of Estudiantes de La Plata who, in 1968, mixed it with Manchester United. Again the British were drawn. In the first game in Argenting, Nobby Stiles, Manchester's England defender, was sent off for disputing a throw-in, although he had been savagely head-butted earlier, and Bobby Charlton needed three stitches for a shin wound. In the return game in Manchester, George Best and Medina were sent off for fighting.

One more year on, and in 1969 A.C. Milan had two players vi-ciously assaulted, one having his nose broken by Guarez, the other being kicked in the back by gcalkeeper Poletti as he lay on the ground, being treated. Although Sucrez. Poletti and Madero were all thrown into jail by their countco light to allay European fears of the Argentine, particularly when, in 1972, Johan Cruyff, the Aiax and Netherlands star, was so harshly treated that he never has recovered totally from the crude ankle injury indicted by National defenders. Ajax had learned its lesson, or had it? The previous year, Ajax had refused to play in South America and Panathinalkos, runners-up in Europe, stepped into the breach as Borussia now has. And so again, when they conquered Farope in 1973, Ajax refused to play and Juvenins deputized. Since then Bayern Munich has judiciously sidestepped two invitations to represent Europe agains) Scuth America-when the CPconents were Argentinians—and in between happily agreed to play Cruzeiro ci Brazil. That was 1976, and Bayern won comfortably, 2-0.

New you have some idea of the recent history that proved dauni-ing to Liverpool, although not apparently to Borussia. Ironically, these two teams have been drawn to meet in the semifinals of this year's European Cup, the first leg of which is to be played in Duesseictal on March 29. Neither Borussia nor Liverpool to: us at it: eryk

is particularly hot in its league at the moment, but, unless the South American experience rebounds on them, and if Borussia can mend the pulled muscle of its European player of the year, Alan Simonsen, in time, I would have favored the Germans to win. The urge to avenge last summer's defeat in the Rome final should, after all, outweigh the desire of Liverpool to repeat its victory. Meanwhile, the rising anxiety for the welfare of Borussia's players, is, you can be sure, reaching all the way to the West German national trainer, Helmut Schoen. In Berti Vogts and Rainer Bonhof, Borussia has two certain World Cup players, and in Jupp Heynckes a possible third. How the World Cup nations, let alone Liverpool, would relish the absence of that trio! Having already declared a leaning towards Borussia, the "underdogs" in one semifinal, let ms go the whole hog and tip Bruges of Belgium to nudge out Juventus of Italy in the other. OK. Bruges is nothing special in European terms, just a solid, dogmatic team of fighters, and OK, Juventus boasts seven full Italian internationals. But that is precisely the point: The players of Bruges will treat their European semi as the uitimate, those of Juventus have the distraction of keeping sound in mind and limb for Argentina. Indeed, this next fortnight could easily see the outcome of the European Cup being settled indirectly by the phobias surround-

Middle-Class Revolt

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK.—Possibly the most important political current flowing just now is the anger of the middle class. From New York to California, news accounts speak of a middle class seething against a system it perceives as increasingly inindifferent if not hostile, to middlec'ass interests. What is curious in this is the absence of any clear idea of what the middle class is The old notion that it was the longer useful.

white-collar and storekeeping Baker branch of society. recegnizable through comfortable but not splashy income and faith in the status quo, is no

For one thing, blue-collar people are nowadays paid as well sometimes better, than their more elegantly dressed neighbors, and tend toward a conservatism that constantly refreshed George Wallace and Richard Nixon alike. For another, economic definitions of a middle class have become almost impossible because of the country's grotesque tax system and the great variations in living costs from area to area. In Manhattan people who earn $70,000 a year insist they are middle class, although people who feel middle class in Nebraska believe them to be rich as Croesus. Home ownership not so long ago was a useful definition of what it meant to be middle class. Yet now part of the middle class anger is directed against government pressures to encourage black home ownership. The fact that blacks may enjoy exuberantly taxed income does not qualify them for acceptance in there middle-class neighborhood protective movements.

The definition of what the middle class is not can be extended until we are led to conclude that it is the only politically influen-tial nonexistent force in American society. Economically, racially, culturally and ideologically, the middle class does not exist. In fact, the spectrum of people who think of themselves as mid-political groupings that routinely fight each other for power. What does exist is a state of mind, dangerous to politicians. When so many natural enemies feri a communatity of political identity the politician must walk with caution. The difficulty here is to identify the common grievance that makes so many natural enemias come together under the mystic banner, "middle class."

Part of the explanation probably les in the fact that government is always a debate about how the rie will be cut. With wealth diminishing and more customers to be served, the pla ie e'iced thioner and thioner there days for a most everybody, while the price continues to rise The result is a pervasive social exerteration arising from the discovery that a most everybody seems to be getting less for his money.

This doesn't explain why so much truculence should garb it-self as "middle class." One theory might be that "middle class" is an idea of such staid respectability in the United States that the term has always carried a heavy lead of values. Even as a term of derision, as it used to be hurked about by bohemians and advanced thinkers it implies con-American respectability. Duliness to be sure, but also respect for good form and convention, for manners and orthodox thought, for hard work. To be middle class was to be sound, the right surt of person, safe, cool headed. What the present middleclass" anger is moving us toward is something quite different. In California it threatens a tax revolt with the most radical consequences. In communities where its aims are to protect the ethnic status quo in schools and housing, it flirts openly with racism. It looks very much, in fact, like what used to be called "white backlash." These and other speculative adventures implicit in the rise of "middle-class" anger seem re-mote from that stolidity for which "middle class" once stood. What we may have here is most of the population in a wolfish mood, instinctively draping itself

They do it to get jobs, to boost their excs, to borrow money, to sell magazine subscriptions, to win political posts, to lure prospective investors into business ventures, to gain entrance into graduate schools and to impress prospective fathers-

The more prestigious the school, the bigger its roster of phony graduates. And companies that once accepted everything on a résume without question are becoming more suspicious and more alert.

"If people never went to college and if they pick a school out of the air, they are certainly more likely to pick a more famous institution-one which comes to mind easier or one that will be more beneficial in getting a job," Wesley Poling, Yale University's director of alumni records, said. 'If they are graduates of colleges with lesser reputations, they'll also dance at prestige schools.

Yale's files of persons who have come to its attention for claiming to be alumni when they are not number more than 7.000. Of the requests that come into Stanford University for substantiation of graduation, an average of one a day doesn't check out. Schools find that many names come up over and over again.

Little to Be Done

There is little the schools can do to stop it. Such false claims constitute misdemeanors in several states, including California and New York. But it is difficult to prosecute even if an offender can be apprehended.

Last year a man from Alexandria, Va., pleaded guilty in a federal court in Baltimore to making an illegal attempt to obtain a high government job with the Federal Trade Commission. He had lied when he said he had a doctorate in computer sciences and three master's degrees. The Harvard Business School says that it writes to those it catches making phony claims. A typical letter: "A person claiming a degree using your name has been fraudulently representing himself. We really don't like this. We are going to have to do something about it." Stanford goes further and threatens legal action, but so far it has not taken

Lt. Donald Hammersley, deputy director of the American Psychiatric Association, believes that such dishonesty takes place because society puts value on attendance at prestige schools.

"Apparently it is so important to some resple that it almost seems true to them that they did go there because they wished so badly that they had." Dr. Hammersley said. "If a person has that kind of personality characteristic allowing him to tell lies and if he thinks he'll not get caught, why then he'll lie about this."

Aithough some persons lie only on resumés for job or loan applications, others go to greater lengths.

Matthew Stephens, director of the undergraduate division of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, recalls that an official-looking transcript was sent back to Wharton by a suspicious personnel officer at Ford Motor Co. The transcript had Mr. Stephens's authentic signature stamp and the imposter had followed the correct grading system, had listed existing courses and given himself average grades.

"It looked like an absolutely authentic transcript," George Parks, associate direcfor of Wharton's Graduate Division, said. We really began to wonder if we had made some kind of mistake. But we just couldn't find this fellow anywhere in our ecords. Then we discovered one mistake He had stamped the date of graduation next to the signature and the date was off by one day."

Wharton has not been able to determine how the phony signature was acquired or how the imposter got an official transcript form.

The Harvard Business School prints a formal resumé book each year that contains the curriculum vitae of all graduates who want to be included. It distributes the book to 300 to 400 corporations looking for employees.

One man who had never attended Harvard had his resumé and picture in the book. As if that were not enough, he got his picture in the Harvard yearbook that year.

Since then, Harvard has tightened its procedure. It requires producers of the resume book to check the names against the official graduating roster.

Prominent persons sometimes lie a little about their education in blographies they supply to Marquis Who's Who, Inc. When the publishing firm discovers an exaggeration, the subject is asked to supply proof. If he cannot, his sketch is pulled from the next year's edition of the proper volume. "Schools and education," Ken Petchenik, president of Marquis, said, "that seems to be the one category of information that people who are going to lie about do lie about. The ironic thing is that these are all successful people. I cannot think of a single instance where the person lied about the reason that gained him entry into 'Who's Who' in the first place."

One educator maintains that by the time a person rises to the prominence necessary to qualify for listing in one of the Who's Who volumes, he is trapped by an earlier lie.

More often than not, the lies on a job resumé come out after a person has been hired because employers often initiate verification checks after the employment process is completed.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., the brokerage firm, said that New York Stock Exchange regulations require it to check out backgrounds of all applicants. The 1 per cent who lie are

Although the number of imposters is on the rise, the practice is by no means new. Yale's files of imposters date back to about 1900. There are trate letters from hotel keepers who charged that persons claiming to be Yale alumni skipped a bill or cashed a bad check. In those days, a Yale degree was equal to today's American Express card in securing credit.

Checking Roots

Many of the entries in the Yale roster of imposters are the result of requests by persons checking their roots. And there are many recorded disappointments when a great-great-grandson finds out that his great-great-grandfather did not get his degree from Yale, no matter what the family stories had held.

There are fathers who find out that their daughters are not marrying a pedicreed Yale or Princeton graduate. Quite a number of prospective fathers-in-law check out their daughters' flancés, educators say.

Even the federal government is getting into the act. When the Justice Department created a new identity for a man convicted of mail fraud who had become a government witness, he was installed in several high-ranking jobs in city departments. On his application for city manager of one community, it was stated that he was a Wharton graduate. He wasn't. @ Los Aspeles Times.

Former heavyweight champion George Foreman says that he became a "born-again" Christian in his dressing room March 17, 1977, shortly after losing to Jimmy Young, and gave up boxing to preach about Jesus. And his religion is also the reason he is coming out of retirement to fight again. He said in Houston that he will use the money he earns to build churches, one in Los Angeles and another in New York. "I want to call it the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ," he said. "And there won't be any gymnasium attached." Asked if he could become heavyweight champion again. Foreman said: "I don't know, Once I get into fighting again, I'm going to train. But I definitely don't have any more hatred in me. If I ever had a killer instinct, it's dead now."

"I feel that the concept of major league rodeo will give America's oldest sport the recognition that it deserves and will show what fine athletes today's rodeo performers are," Steve Ford, 21, the son of former President Gerald Ford, said when he signed with the Los Angeles Rough Riders. one of six rodeo teams launching a major lesgue rodeo circuit. He signed on as calf roper and chief spokesman for the team. Ford studied agriculture at Utah State University and animal science at California State Polytechnic University in Pomona.
